Dreamvision Stores are unbreakable

Pure HiFi, the Dreamvision premium Store that was highlighted in the last Dream News of July 2010 has been hit, like the whole city of Christchurch New-Zealand, by a terrible earthquake. Fortunately, no one at Pure HiFi was hurt and they can already re-open the doors to the public, with our very best wishes.

"5 Super-Sleek Video Projectors"

You don't have to hide your video projector if it looks as good as these machines do.

Video projectors are a staple of any dedicated home theater. Many times, though, you don't even know they're in the room, because the custom electronics pro has tucked the machine into a wall, the ceiling or a custom-made soffit.

There's absolutely nothing wrong with doing that, but keeping the unit out in the open has its advantages, too [...] The obvious benefit [...] is that it precludes the need for a special ventilation system. The unit (all projectors generate heat when they're operating) can cool itself without any extra help as long as it's not encased inside something.

Another advantage is that the projector can be more easily accessed for maintenance and upgrades. Bulbs, wiring and other components can be easily added, upgraded and tweaked.

Last but not least, a projector that's left in the open is much easier and quicker to install than one that's being fitted inside the ceiling, wall or soffit. This means you'll spend less money on labor.

We've compiled some of the sleekest, most attractive projectors around for your consideration. With looks like these, there's no way you'll want to hide them. Instead, make them a statement piece of your media room.

The chassis of the Starlight 3 from DreamVision was created by French designer, Antoine Beon. In addition to white, you can order it in black or other colors to suit your interior.
